Those Good Old Days.

That good old day has almost passed.
When any honest man,
With brains, could rise from poverty,
And lead our nation's van.
That good old day is almost passed
No more to come again,
When those who climb to honor's heights,
Were plain lag-catch men.
That good old day has passed away
When politics were free
From "rings" and bosses just in it
"For revenue only."
When offices of public trust,
Could not be bought and sold,
And brains, and push, and honesty,
Could wield more power than gold.

That good old day has passed away—
If one for office ran,
A record loyal, brave, and true
Must show or change his plan.
Conventions halls with police packed,
Were not in those days men,
To help some self-appointed "boss,"
Control his tame machine.

We would not have that old day back
With its grand and chivalrous men.
We do want back that sentiment,
That ruled our country then.
When offices of public trust
Could not be bought and sold,
And brains, and push, and honesty,
Could wield more power than gold.

The Wide World.

Gen. Pretorius is to be released on parole and sent to his home by Lord Roberts.

London newspaper correspondents report that Gen. Joubert has been severely wounded by a shell and will not be able to be in command again.
The same man reports that the Boer attack on Ladysmith was a serious mistake.

Reports from South Africa indicate that Gen. Buller has again crossed the Tugela River and is advancing on Ladysmith. He is expected to relieve the town soon. Gen. White, of the garrison, expects speedy release by Gen. Buller. Indications point that way. On the contrary, Gen.
Schaffel, a retired officer of the U. S.
Army in considering the situation,
says Ladysmith is sure to be captured by the Boers, as Gen. White is in a position where he can hardly be reached by reinforcements.

Our Country.

Gov. Roosevelt sent a message of encouragement to Gov. Taylor, applauding his stand and urging him to hold out.

Gen. H. W. Lawton recently killed in the Philippines, will be buried

A great strike of all the building trades is on in Chicago, and business is practically tied up.

Miners in conference recently at Indianapolis succeeded in obtaining an increase of 14 cents per ton for mining coal.

Maj. John A. Logan, killed in the Philippines, has been brought to the United States, and taken to the Logan home at Youngstown, O.

STATE NEWS.

The rumor was current yesterday that Goebel was killed by some relative of John Sanford, whom Goebel killed five years ago. Suspicion would point to Republicans very naturally. Goebel wore a coat of mail, but the steel bullet penetrated it.

The trouble at Frankfort over the question of governorship has subsided partially, though it may break out at any time. The death of Goebel seems to have quieted, for the time, the trouble which was imminent, but it is doubtless true that there will be more trouble later. Members of the Legislature are in attendance at London and more are expected at any time. The opinion generally expressed is that sympathy is turning to the Republicans again.

County News.

Gen. John B. Gordon lectures in Richmond next Tuesday night.

A number of Madison citizens have been in Frankfort during the past week.

C. E. Woods, editor of the Richmond Register, is on an extended Eastern trip.

A large crowd was in town Monday. About 1500 cattle were offered, and there were takers at 2 to 6 cents.
The trade was brisk, and the milk market exceedingly active. Good milk was brought from $1.00 to $1.45 each. Others not so good brought smaller figures. The horse business was about as usual.—Pantagraph.

PERSONAL.

ter the infirmary for medical treatment.

C. S. Wyatt went to Cincinnati Wednesday to see his sister who is sick in the hospital there.
He returned Friday.

P. R. Johnson and wife returned Friday from Richmond where Mr. Johnson has been for medical treatment. His health is very poor at present.

E. W. Todd, Berea '97 left Friday for Champaign, Ill., where he enters upon a course of study leading to chemical engineering. He joins J. C. Fay, '99, who is studying there.

On Thursday evening, Rev. H. J. Berthick performed the ceremony which united in marriage
H. H. Christman and Miss Laura Coyle, at the residence of the bride's father, J. C. Coyle.

Mrs. VanWinkle, mother of J. W. VanWinkle and Mrs. Cash Cliff, died last Monday morning. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at Mrs. Cliff's where she had made her home for years. Burial Monday afternoon in Berea Cemetery.

Madison Todd died at his home on the Walnut Meadow pike, near Berea, early last Monday morning. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon, burial being in the home-burying grounds.
Deceased was 93 years old, the oldest man in Madison county.

Prof. and Mrs. L. V. Dodge went to Richmond Thursday to attend the concert given by the Col-oreds. Professor returned Friday, but Mrs. Dodge went to Lancaster to spend Sunday with Mrs.
G. M. Patterson, returning Monday. They report that the concert was a great success, being a fine entertainment.

hearing, and rode horseback to Mt.
Vernon recently. Near his home is the old overshot water-wheel built by him years ago, still in operation. Mr. McGuire lives about a half mile from the Iron Jacket church and has 12 children, 100 grand children and about 500 great-grand children.

CLOTHING!

WE are prepared to cloth you with the lowest priced, rightly made, absolutely all wool clothing in America. Rightly made, as it is of famous "Vitals" brand the only ready-to-wear clothing tailored on a strictly scientific basis in clean, well ventilated workrooms. Perfect fitting and wear resisting, because the inside, the "Vitals," the very life of the garment, is carefully made in making, represents the expenditure of time and thought, and is a decided contrast to the tailoring seen in ordinary ready-to-wear clothing. The fabrics that we show are the very newest designs that will be seen this season. Many garments exclusively to us, in the face of the above facts. The most extraordinary feature combining our great offer is, that we can and do sell our clothing at

LESS MONEY

Than elsewhere. How can we afford to sell such high-grade clothing for less money than elsewhere? Our answer is pure and simple: This is a modern store, constructed strictly on progressive plans, our clothing is sold on the smallest margin of profit, depending on a large volume of business. The more clothing we sell, the greater our purchasing power the lower our prices, that's the story in a nut-shell.

COVINGTON & MITCHELL

Garfield," was the best lecture heard here for a long time. It compares very favorably with any lecture delivered here in recent years, even by lecturers from abroad. Many favorable criticisms were heard, the remark being frequently made, "It was the best thing here for years." This is a correct estimate, for the lecture showed long and careful preparation, and was delivered with fine oratorical effect. The effect was easily imagined. The audience was very attentive from first to last, and showed its appreciation by long and hearty applause at the close, showing that the best is thoroughly appreciated by Berea audiences.

In Memoriam.

At the January meeting of the W. U. T. U. was held a memorial service for our much-loved sister, Mrs. VanWinkle, who was called to her Heavenly Home last November.

Katherine VanWinkle, daughter of Lewis and Margaret Coyle Davis, was born in what is now Madison Co. Ky., Oct. 31, 1827. She was converted in 1852, and often said that she felt as though she fell at Jesus' feet at her conversion. She was married to James W. VanWinkle, March 3, 1857.
She and her husband with eight children came to Berea, Ky., in 1856.

Her life was an example, and her loss is missed not only by husband, sons, and daughters, but by our Union, the Church, and the community in general. She was earnest, faithful, affectionate, forgiving, and possessed a faith which gave her at all times the good cheer enjoyed by the Lord, all this brought a beautiful peace to her soul and inspired others with a desire to reach the heights she had attained.

Her greatest work was in the home where she reared four daughters and six sons, all of whom "rise up and call her blessed," for she was one of the most patient, loving, and careful of mothers.
She shielded her children from temptation, at the same time instilling into them the real principles of virtue and purity which made them strong when temptation came.

The program of the memorial service was arranged to bring out her characteristics. One spoke of her as a sister. Another of her as a director in our industrial. Two daughters spoke lovingly and tenderly of her from earlier resolutions, giving us glimpses of her impartial hospitality, often extended to the lowly and outcast;
of instances when she stood against some ways of social life when she considered that such brought danger or suspicion to the pure name of her daughter, and at all times she taught them that her instructions were the safe ways of life because they were according to the word of God.

Another spoke of her as successful in bringing to manhood six sons with that good name which is better than great riches. And her sons have this good name, while so many of our young men bear names stained with evils of which it is a shame to speak, because she taught them from childhood that customs of society not in accordance with the word of God must not be followed by them, showing them plainly the evils that are destroying society. Realizing their danger, she often said, "I can only live until my sons are grown, I shall be satisfied."

Volunteers spoke of her as a neighbor. To those in trouble she was always able to bring comfort, testifying to the times when God had been her help in the time of trouble.

She had only such education as her early surroundings afforded, but her association with those who valued the benefits of church and school gave her that knowledge which made her one whose counsel was eagerly sought in times of perplexity or when difficulties arose.

"Faith is deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord—she shall be preserved."
At the close of the meeting these resolutions
were adopted:

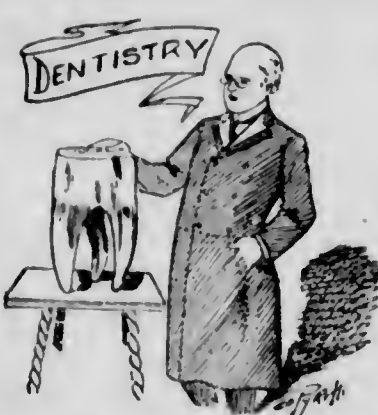

Whereas in the Providence of God, our beloved sister, Katherine VanWinkle, who had been a member of the W. U. T. U. from its organization, is dead.

Resolved, That as a Union we have lost one of our most active and faithful workers; one who was ready at all times to make personal sacrifice to do her part in this or any work to which her master called her.

2. That while in her death we are reminded of the transitory things of earth we shall our selves be spurred to greater activities and this in a measure make up for the loss which her departure has caused.

3. That, as a Union we express our sympathy to the bereaved husband, sons, and daughters, and to the sister in our midst so sorely bereft.

4. That these resolutions be spread upon our records, that a copy be furnished the bereaved family, and that they be published in the BEREAN CITIZEN.

Our study and practical work for years have been the TEETH AND THEIR TROUBLES.

Is it any wonder, therefore, that in 99 cases out of a hundred, we can remedy faulty teeth? It is folly to let a decayed or broken tooth go without attention, simply because it does not ache. It may cause you a great deal of trouble later. Let us see what we can do to put it in good shape:

KENTUCKY STATUTES.

VACCINATION.
SEC. 4608. Adults to be vaccinated. All persons of the age of 21 years or over, who have not been vaccinated, or, if vaccinated, not successfully, shall, within three months after this revision takes effect, procure their own vaccination or re-vaccination, as the case may be.

SEC. 4609. Minors and infants—vaccination. All parents, guardians, and persons having the care, custody, and control of any child or children, or who may have in their employ any minor or minors, shall have the same vaccinated; and every parent, guardian, and person who may have the care, custody, or control of any child born hereafter shall have said child vaccinated within twelve months after its birth or after it comes under his or her care, custody, or control.

SEC. 4610. Persons coming from other States to be vaccinated. All persons coming into this State to abide or become citizens who have not been vaccinated, or who may have children under their care or control that have not been vaccinated, shall procure the vaccination of themselves and said children within six months after coming to this State.

CONCERNING THE SPREAD OF SMALL-POX.

SEC. 4615. Patients having small-pox—care to be taken of. Every person superintending a hospital or other place where a patient having the small-pox is confined, shall prohibit all intercourse thereof with persons not having the disease, and shall, before discharging a patient, or suffering him to be removed, take due care that his person is thoroughly cleansed, and his clothes, such as have not been infected with the disease, under the penalty of ten dollars.

SEC. 4616. Persons going where small-pox prevails may be confined. If any person who has never had the small-pox shall go into a house where the small-pox is, or associate with a person who is afflicted therewith, with just cause of the peace, on due proof of the fact, may cause such person to be conveyed to some house or place in the country where the disease will not spread, there to remain until he shall have gone through the disease, or until a physician shall certify that he will not take the same. If such person be not able to pay the expense of his nursing, the county shall pay the same.

SEC. 4617. Penalty for willfully spreading. If any person shall willfully endeavor to spread or propagate the small-pox, he shall be subject to be indicted and fined the sum of five hundred dollars, or to be imprisoned for six months.

SEC. 4618. Penalty for person having small-pox going to public places. Any person who, having reason at the time to believe himself afflicted with the disease of small-pox, shall voluntarily go upon any public highway or street, or to any place at which people are accustomed to collect or assemble, or who shall enter or go on board any steamboat, railroad car, or other public conveyance, and any person who shall knowingly assist anyone thus to offend, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.

The wife of Jason Bion, an aged resident of Nansum county, Va., lately gave birth to her twenty-eighth child, a lusty infant, which, at birth, had two front teeth.

In the New York legislature has been introduced a bill requiring street car companies operating in New York city to employ three persons, a gripman, a fare collector and a conductor on all cars exceeding thirty feet in length during rush hours. The duty of the conductor is to stay on the rear platform to stop and start the car.

So close is the personal resemblance between Senator Kinney, of Delaware, and Senator McComas, of Maryland, that the presiding officer has on several occasions mistaken the man who rose for recognition. Each now sends up his hand before he arises unless when speaking hurriedly, when he usually announces his name to avoid mistakes.

It is nearly six years since the first electric boat, imported from the United States, was placed on a Venetian canal. Evidently the innovation has won popular approval, despite the opposition of gamblers, for it is announced that a company has been formed to operate both steam and electric launches between the Lido and the Piazzetta.

Denmark's kings for 354 years have all been named Christian or Frederick. This is not the result of accident. It is the law of Denmark that Christian must be succeeded by Frederick and Frederick by Christian. To attain this and without the changing of names in case of death or other reason every Danish prince, no matter what other names he may receive, always includes Christian and Frederick among them.

A post mortem examination has revealed that Miss Ella Gates, who died recently at her home near Ontario, N. Y., had two perfectly developed hearts. Miss Gates was in her 25th year. She never enjoyed robust health, and since her early teens had been an invalid. The slightest exertion brought on complete prostration. She died while writing a note to her brother, leaving a sentence unfinished.

France, Germany and the United States are endeavoring to secure a stable and safe powder that will at the same time give low pressure and high velocity. England has contented herself with the use of cordite. Ordnance officers agree that cordite is a very suitable powder, but it has one defect. Gases from which cordite is fired quickly erode, and the heat is so intense that the life of a gun is considerably lessened.

A Pittsburgh concern has received an order for some wire glass strong enough to walk on and fireproof, to be used on the tower of London. This American visitors to the tower will add to their recollections of Julius Caesar, William the Conqueror, Lady Jane Grey, Sir Walter Raleigh, the traitor's Gate and the Beefeaters the memory of good, solid Pittsburgh glass with steel wire wound with asbestos yarn imbedded in it.

A sample of Egyptian porcelain found at Memphis was recently submitted to M. Le Chatelier for analysis, and the interesting fact was brought out that it was entirely different from the Chinese porcelain. This leads to the conclusion that the manufacture of true porcelain was known to the ancient Egyptians. To duplicate this particular kind of porcelain would require forty parts of blue glass, fifty parts of fine sand and five parts of white clay.

The newly founded town of Triangle, Tex., promises to be unique. It is laid out in the form of an equilateral triangle; its lots are triangular in shape, and the ground plan of each of the 21 houses which have thus far been erected there is three cornered. The three principal streets are Equilateral, Sentinal and Isosceles, and the residents have carried their curious idea into the local government, which consists of a so-called triangular council, having three members.

War critics, in discussing the Tugela, seem disposed to count "knowledge of the ground" as a factor largely in favor of the Boer combatants. Whatever the relative advantages enjoyed by the opposing forces may have been, ignorance of the locality on the part of the British can hardly be reckoned as a point in favor of the Boers. For years past Ladysmith has been a military camp of some importance, and for months, at least, the whole neighborhood south of it must have been familiar to British commanders.

THE DEBUTANTE.

Here in her dainty chamber
The snow-white feet it lies,
The dress that brought each a sparkle
Of joy to her violet eyes.
A wonder garment fashioned
In yards upon yards of lace,
With knots of silvery ribbons
To fasten the folds in place.

Go lay it away forever
In the sweet, dead leaves of the rose,
With the fan and the fairy slippers,
The gloves and the alkan base,
The bedice, too, that was fitted
To her girlish and graceful shape,
And, heavy with frosty fringes,
The long white opera cape.

For Madge shr is done with dancing,
And the pleasures and pains of life;
No more shall she call her mother,
And no man call her wife.
For below in the darkened parlor,
With her slender feet unshod,
She lies on a couch of illies,
At dressed for the Count of God,

I borrowed an arquebus from one of my men, and the arrangement was made to charge out after a volley, the first shot of which I was to fire. All being now ready, it was only necessary for us to wait. I would merely add that in order to prevent discovery by the neglect of the horses, we had muzzled ours as far as possible. There was now a dead silence, that was only broken by the rustle of the leaves overhead, an occasional crack amongst the dry boughs as a squirrel moved against them, or the uneasy movement of a horse, which caused a clink of a chain-bit, and a straining sound made by the leathers of the saddle, that was not in reality so loud as it seemed; but caused Jacopo and I to look at each other with a look of intense interest.

So close is the personal resemblance between Senator Kinney, of Delaware, and Senator McComas, of Maryland, that the presiding officer has on several occasions mistaken the man who rose for recognition. Each now sends up his hand before he arises unless when speaking hurriedly, when he usually announces his name to avoid mistakes.

A post mortem examination has revealed that Miss Ella Gates, who died recently at her home near Ontario, N. Y., had two perfectly developed hearts. Miss Gates was in her 25th year. She never enjoyed robust health, and since her early teens had been an invalid. The slightest exertion brought on complete prostration. She died while writing a note to her brother, leaving a sentence unfinished.

France, Germany and the United States are endeavoring to secure a stable and safe powder that will at the same time give low pressure and high velocity. England has contented herself with the use of cordite. Ordnance officers agree that cordite is a very suitable powder, but it has one defect. Gases from which cordite is fired quickly erode, and the heat is so intense that the life of a gun is considerably lessened.

A Pittsburgh concern has received an order for some wire glass strong enough to walk on and fireproof, to be used on the tower of London. This American visitors to the tower will add to their recollections of Julius Caesar, William the Conqueror, Lady Jane Grey, Sir Walter Raleigh, the traitor's Gate and the Beefeaters the memory of good, solid Pittsburgh glass with steel wire wound with asbestos yarn imbedded in it.

A sample of Egyptian porcelain found at Memphis was recently submitted to M. Le Chatelier for analysis, and the interesting fact was brought out that it was entirely different from the Chinese porcelain. This leads to the conclusion that the manufacture of true porcelain was known to the ancient Egyptians. To duplicate this particular kind of porcelain would require forty parts of blue glass, fifty parts of fine sand and five parts of white clay.

The newly founded town of Triangle, Tex., promises to be unique. It is laid out in the form of an equilateral triangle; its lots are triangular in shape, and the ground plan of each of the 21 houses which have thus far been erected there is three cornered. The three principal streets are Equilateral, Sentinal and Isosceles, and the residents have carried their curious idea into the local government, which consists of a so-called triangular council, having three members.

War critics, in discussing the Tugela, seem disposed to count "knowledge of the ground" as a factor largely in favor of the Boer combatants. Whatever the relative advantages enjoyed by the opposing forces may have been, ignorance of the locality on the part of the British can hardly be reckoned as a point in favor of the Boers. For years past Ladysmith has been a military camp of some importance, and for months, at least, the whole neighborhood south of it must have been familiar to British commanders.

two who were living, and one who was going away.

I bathed the forehead and drawn lips, from which flowed a thin stream of blood, and as I did so her eyes opened, but the film of death was on them.

"Di Savelli! Ego," and she was gone.

Gone like a flash, thus swiftly and fast into eternity, struck down, perhaps unwittingly, by the arrow which would have been a snail to her. I have often wondered if D'Entragues ever knew who fell to his pistol shot. If he did, God pity him! In the one glimpse I caught of his white face, as he swung round and rode off, I thought I saw a look of horror. But everything went so quickly, that then I had no time to think, and now I can recall but the end.

To her dead lips I pressed his crucifix, and into her dead ears he mumbled prayers. I knelt beside her, and I thought I saw, thinking only of the great love that had laid down a life.

One by one my men stole up, and stood in a half circle, leaning on the cross handles of their swords, over which the grim, bearded faces looked down on us in pity.

Suddenly I turned and looked at the dead body of Di Savelli, and I thought I saw a look of horror. But everything went so quickly, that then I had no time to think, and now I can recall but the end.

CHAPTER XXV.
THE VENGEANCE OF CORTE.

We buried our dead; and, as usual, beneath the flag, in the courtyard at the castle, below the north wall. Over her nameless grave we raised a rude cross, and after it was done, I turned and looked at the dead body of Di Savelli, and I thought I saw a look of horror. But everything went so quickly, that then I had no time to think, and now I can recall but the end.

It was all we could do to keep our own heads on our shoulders; but by dint of shouting, "A Colonel!" with the Colonel, and "Orsini!" with the Orsini, and sometimes hitting a shield blow or two, we crossed the Ripetta, and in a few minutes were safe in the Palazzo Corneto.

Here we were received by Le Clere, who counted the trembling Strigonia, with the assurance that an excellent supper awaited him, informing me, almost in the same breath, that D'Ambrase was in the Vatican. I lost no time in repairing thither, which I did on foot, accompanied by Jacopo alone, and made my way without let or hindrance to the Sala Regia. Here everything was in the wildest confusion, and the Spanish soldiers of the pope were plundering right and left.

I stumbled across De Leva, who, with a few men at his back, was trying to maintain order. He gladly accepted the offer of my sword, and I did what I could to prevent the wholesale robbery from going on. In a brief interval of rest, I asked, "Do you know where D'Ambrase is?"

"In the Sala Regia, with half a dozen others, De Leva said, pointing the entrance." "And Alexander?"

"Dead or dying, I do not even know where he is. But he has been seized as he was, and, carrying Cesare on a litter has escaped to Ostia."

"Then Cesare is dead?"

"No, Cesare is still alive, and he is being carried to a rooming house, full of soldiers, and, I am sure, he will be safe."

Jacopo heaved a sigh of relief as we came out, and I felt a different man as I ran down the steps of the Sala Regia. Here I met with De Leva again, and told him what I had seen.

"The Cornetengo has just gone to him," he answered, referring to the pope, "and you have missed D'Ambrase. He has returned to the Palazzo Corneto. Can do nothing here, and am going myself. Do you walk or ride? I have no horse."

"Walk," I answered, and the Spaniard looked me up in surprise, as, followed by Jacopo, we took our way back to the cardinal's house.

On reaching there I sought D'Ambrase at once. He had heard of my arrival, and was awaiting me. After a brief greeting, I told him his business was done, and handed him the guarantee I had received from Hawkwood. He was mightily pleased, and, as may be imagined, I told him my duty to inform him of the death of St. Armande, telling him how it occurred, without in any way disclosing my knowledge of the secret. He was much affected.

"It is a sad business," he said, "but we have other things to think of now. Mon Dieu! mon Dieu!" And to this day I am unaware if he knew or not.

But the night was not yet over, and late as it was, there were yet things to be done. About midnight we heard that the cardinal was dead, and a few minutes later Gentil Orsini hurried to the cardinal. They held a hasty council, and De Brinnet and I were summoned. News had come that Cesare had not yet left Ostia, that he was too ill to travel, and D'Ambrase and Orsini resolved on a bold stroke. It was nothing less than the capture of Bologna. Orsini offered to lead 200 lances for the purpose, but a leader was wanted. He could not go himself, as his sickness, which he had been unable to shake, was on the point of death, and he was in no condition to make a dash for the Borgo at any moment. The short of it was, that at the cardinal's recommendation, I received the command, and about two in the morning set out for Ostia. If the ships Cesare had hired had arrived the matter was ended, and we could do nothing; but if not, there was every chance of his surrendering without a blow, as although he had about 500 men with him, they were not to be relied on, except the half-breed out-throat who formed his personal guard, and who might be trusted to fight to the last. The luck which had followed me so far favored me again, and pressing on as fast as our horses could bear us, we came up with the fugitives in the early morning. Only one ship, too small to hold all, had come, and they were crowded on the banks of the Tiber, making every effort to escape. The river shore was strewn with the enormous quantity of baggage they had with them, and a scene of the most confusion took place on our arrival. The ship was drawing up to the quay, and we could see the litter of the Borga, a surround by the few men who meant to fight. The pillar was over in five minutes, and Cesare was my prisoner. Seeing how matters stood, the master of the ship anchored in midstream, useless of the yells and exclamations of the followers of the Borga, who were not spared by my men. Indeed, I had great difficulty in keeping them from harm. He was in truth very ill, but was able to jump out as he yielded.

"Maledetto!" was my fate. I had prepared for everything except being ill. He then lay back in his litter, and spoke no more.

Monday morning.
The passenger in the elevator of the large apartment house smiled at the boy who came to her. "Seems to me, William," she said, "I smell cabbage."

"Yes'm," replied the elevator boy. "The Friguan's on the third floor back, is cooking 'em for dinner."

"If I'm not mistaken, William, there is a strong odor of mutton here."

"Yes'm. They're havin' mutton for dinner at the Welkerson's, on the next floor, about halfway back."

"William, where does that smell of onions come from?"

"Gomes' in the Chippinners, ma'am. Their company's gone, and they don't have no meat to-day."

"I think I notice a flavor of soap in the atmosphere, William."

"Yes'm. The Drunkmerry's is down 'their washin'." They do that every two weeks.

Friday.
"Who's having fish today, William?"

"The Swallowers, on the fourth floor, the Biddlecomers and the Shadwells, on the second floor, and the Jordans, on the third. The Jordans is gon' to have turkey, but they haven't come to cook it yet."

"Do you know what we are to have for dinner, William?"

"Yes'm. Cold meat an' turnips, but I won't tell anybody, ma'am."—Chicago Tribune.

THE readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one cure for all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Catarrh's Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer the Hundred Dollar Refund to anyone who cannot be cured by using it. Send for list of testimonials.

Anxious to be an admirable twit, but it is not the single question of success. Among highly educated youths must be numbered a German who for several years has been apprehensive to a degree. The young man felt that constant worrying was not compatible with his hopes for the future. Accordingly, he decided to take a few months' rest, and addressed a letter to the head of the great Rathschold banking house at Frankfurt, setting forth at some length his strong dislike for his trade, and asking to be accepted as "an apprentice in commerce," promising diligence and all application in learning "the business." The young man is still a cooped-up youth's companion.

A Family Tree.

It seems worth while to trace the family line through several generations back, sometimes, that we may know all the interests that gather round the family history. Especially would it be pleasant to trace in the families of Kentucky the various relationships that bind them to each other and to their ancestors in Virginia, or in Scotland, England, and Ireland. Students and others are invited to help in the good work of finding out our kin by filling, as far as knowledge permits, blanks to be furnished by teachers. Below is a sample of the blank partially filled, to show how the family tree appears and what it tells. Many in Kentucky, with the aid of the old folks, can give a full record. The place and date of birth are especially useful in tracing relationship and ancestry.

Refooting Stockings.

When the heels and soles are so much worn as to require a great deal of darning, it is much more satisfactory to refoot the stockings than to continue mending. The method here given is one which has proved very useful, as the seams do not hurt the tenderest foot, and the fit is excellent. It also takes less time to repair a stocking in this manner than to darn or patch it.

Cut from pasteboard or stiff paper the patterns marked Fig. 1 and Fig. 2. Fold the worn stocking through the middle of the heel and by pattern Fig. 1 cut it off far enough to avoid all thin places. The dotted line in Fig. 3 shows the manner of cutting the stocking down.

Now cut by pattern Fig. 2 new soles from some suitable material—woven is best, as it is so much more elastic. Sew the seam from a to b and sew the piece into the stocking.

The best parts of old underwear may be used for these soles; and when any undervest or pants are abandoned, it is well to cut out as many as can be obtained from it, and thus keep a supply ready in the mending basket. Having them ready cut, it takes but a short time when a pair of stockings requires fixing, to replace the worn part and have them neat and whole. If there are several pairs to do, it is quite allowable to baste in the new holes and stitch the lot on the machine. Although these part-worn soles give fair service, those cut from new are of course better, and if the webbing which was formerly used by thrifty housewives to make into stockings—being simply the leg of a stocking and bought by the yard—can be obtained, it would be excellent for the purpose.

Another way is to knit the soles. Sometimes there is a member of the family who likes a bit of plain pick-up work, or perhaps there is an auntie or grandma who has leisure but not eye-sight for fancy work. For their benefit directions are given for knitted soles.

KNITTED SOLES.

This begins at the heel. Cast on twelve stitches and add one at each end of the needle on the right side of the work, knitting plain across and sewing back until there are fifty-one stitches. Then knit without increasing ten times back and forth before narrowing off the heel, which is done as usual. Pick up twenty-eight stitches each side of heel, then after knitting about an inch, narrow gradually down to fifty stitches, which is a good width for the sole. Knit the sole the length to suit and narrow off at the toe. —Ladies World.

THE SCHOOL.

Edited by MRS. ELIZA H. YOUNG, Dean of the Normal Department, Berea College.

George Eliot knew what noble friendships meant. She says, "Those who trust us educate us." And some one else wisely says, "There is little influence where there is not great sympathy."

As teachers we may well ask ourselves the practical meaning of these words. Hostile cities and human hearts are not to be won by similar means. We shall never get friendship by demanding it. We can never force sympathy any more than we can manufacture sunshine and any attempt at pretense puts us forever outside the reach of any heart that has detected the deception.

The very first demand we make of love, as of gold, is that it be genuine. Many a boy in school—the proverbially "bad boy" of the neighborhood has discovered in himself fine strong seeds of good that he did not know existed till the light of a teacher's confidence shown into his soul and in the gentle warmth of sympathy the germs of good began a healthy growth. He was being educated in some things of far more value than simple arithmetic and grammar.

And I should like to warn teachers now that no amount of self-righteous indignation and scolding can take the place of quiet, sympathetic "Put yourself in his place."

There is a good deal of selfish masquerading under the guise of friendship. When we rely on our "friends" to get us into positions, for which we may have no fitness, when we value them because they may have wealth or influence, or for any material gain that may come to us, we have yet to learn the secret of fine friendship—if indeed our selfishness has not forever closed our eyes and hardened our hearts to its responsibility.

It is not that real friends will not want to do many things for each other by way of material blessings and comfort, but it is from a far deeper root that such service springs. "What do we live for if not to make life less difficult to each other?"

Emerson says, "It is good to give a stranger a meal or a night's lodging. 'Tis better to be hospitable to his good-meaning and thoughtful and give courage to a companion."

One of the very best things that can come to any life is the inspiration of a strong true friend. We try to live up to his expectation of us. "Let the ideals of us in the hearts that love us be prophetic of what we shall become." And Mrs. Stowe says, "Once in an age God sends to some of us a friend who loves in us, not a false imagining, an unreal character, but looking through all the rubbish of our imperfections, loves in us the divine ideal of our nature, loves not the man that we are, but the angel we may become."

And while we are trying to learn many things, while we seek power, while we desire material gains, we may better long to be such that we shall make and keep friends.

Thomas Hughes says, "Blessed is the man who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things but above all the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and living in another man." "What a thing friendship is. World without end." "A man may travel through the world and sow it thick with friendships."

THE FARM.

Edited by S. C. MARSH, Professor of Horticulture, Berea College.

Forest Pasture.

Another item of considerable importance in the forestry budget of many sections of the country is the fact that forest lands are considered every one's lands as far as their use is concerned. The damage which the berry-picker, the ginseng man, the moss gatherer, the hunter, the fisherman, and other "intruders" into private property inflict upon the forest, is insignificant. Significant, however, is the harm which horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs, driven into the forest and authorized by law to roam about unrestrainedly, carry with them.

As long as pasturing animals are permitted to feed upon seeds and seedlings, it is impossible to grow forests; and as long as the counties or the states allow such pasturage, a second growth of timber cannot be obtained. It is no more feasible for the farmer to raise vegetables and cattle on the same land, than it is for the case of seedlings and cattle.

In older times when forests were property of the states, there was some excuse for the practice of pasturing the forests, the much more so as in many sections no other use could be made of the forests. From the moment on, however, at which the forest became private property, the owner should be entitled to demand that other people be forbidden by state to use such property for their benefit and to the detriment of the owner, who has paid for the land and is paying the taxes.

No one will embark in forestry undertakings as long as the production of the forest is endangered by fires, as long as the forests are heavily and unjustly taxed, and as long as all stock owners are allowed to use the forest alongside with the rightful proprietor.

In conclusion, forestry cannot come quickly; it can come only with the increase of stumpage value, with wise taxation and thorough protection of forestry investments. The drawbacks of forestry as an industry for private enterprise are manifold. Unless the commonwealth offers considerable inducements, changing the tax laws and protecting the forest, private capital will not flow into forestry; and unless these inducements are offered soon, 85 per cent. of all American forests—viz. all private forests—will have disappeared, when the desired rise of stumpage values arrives. The forestal history of the countries surrounding the Mediterranean will have repeated itself.
